JOHNSON'S JERSEYS COLLEGIATE COLLECTOR NEWSLETTER

THE OPENING FACEOFF... NEW ARRIVALS

Boston. University. Terriers. While there have been other new arrivals since the last newsletter, this recent acquisition deserves its own edition. We have more than 150 BU game worns and practice jerseys in stock. Pages three and four have a complete run-down on what is available, but they go back as far as 20+ years ago and are priced from $150 and up. Photos of all the jerseys can of course be found on the website and the link below will take you directly to the Hockey East page and the BU collection.

TIMEOUT FOR COACHING... HOW BIG IS THAT JERSEY?

Some of the most common questions I am asked by other collectors relate to jersey sizing:

- "What size is the jersey?"
- "What size T-shirt size is similar to 52?"
- "How does CCM sizing compare to Nike?"
- "What does the 'G' mean in the size?"

I thought this BU acquisition would be a great chance to answer some of those questions with some head-to-head comparisons and measurements. As I discussed in a previous newsletter, BU has sourced their jerseys from SP in Canada for most of the last couple decades. The SP jerseys had branding patches added to align with other athletics endorsement deals from Bauer, Reebok, CCM, Under Armour, New Balance, Warrior, etc. So, while the "brand" on the exterior might change, the sizing has been consistent.

Numerical sizing is generally 2x the chest width (size 56 = 28" chest width x 2). While it might seem like a big deal to go from a size 52 to 54, in reality the jerseys don't change all that much as you'll see in the images that follow. This comparison images show player sizes 48-52-56 on top of each other and a second image comparing player size 56 to goalie size 58G. For the player cut comparison, I omitted sizes 50 and 54 for clarity. So the size differences shown would only be half as much going from one size to the next if all of the sizes were present.

While goalie body sizing follows the information above, the "G" cut has changes to the sleeve profile to allow a comfortable fit over a chest protector. So, the next time you're considering a jersey based on the size, keep in mind how much (or how little) the jersey actually changes from size to size.
